The Tulane Jewish Studies Department will host a lecture by Shari Rabin, "How Frontier Jews Made American Judaism," on Monday, March 18. Rabin is an assistant professor of Jewish studies and director of the Pearlstine/Lipov Center for Southern Jewish Culture at the College of Charleston. The Jewish American Family - Jewish Virtual Library Any discussion of American Jewish family life as an institution must view it within the context of contemporary American social, economic, and political life. All contemporary American Jews are "Jews by choice" in that their relationship with the Jewish people, Judaism, and its institutions is voluntary. They have freedom and feel part of mainstream American life.
